OUR YEARLY "IN MEMORIAM"

TEN THOUSAND SOLDIERS MARCH DOWN FIFTH AVENUE,

No Stint of Applause for the Callant Young Guardsmen, but the Shambling Veterans and Their Tattered Fings Play the First Part in the Parade-Policeman Purker

Spotis a Runaway-Scenes on the Way. Five thousand amateur and almost as many retired soldiers marched past Gen. Russell A. Alger, at the foot of the Worth monument, between 10 o'clock and noon yesterday. Two thousand persons crowded upon stands on either side of the street and watched the parade, and many thousands more, standing along the curbs up and down Fifth avenue, saw as much of it as they could. There was another standand more crowds at Union Square. The parade was one of the largest and best managed for many years.

The reviewing stands at Madison square and the streets around them were crowded at 95 o'clock, the hour set for the start of the prosion at Fifty-ninth street, and when Gen. Aiger was driven up to the main stand from his hotel the applause and cheers frightened the spirited team attached to his carriage, and they boiled straight for the crowd massed along the curb. The driver could not control them, and for an instant serious consequences were feared, but Policeman Seymour V. Parker of the Broadway squad selzed one of the horses by the bridle, and, at considerable risk to himself, hung on until he stopped the team, which dragged him twenty feet. The carriage was then driven back to the stand, and Gen. Alger and his party slighted in safety.

Mayor Grant arrived at the stand at about the same time and took a place in front, beside Gen. Alger. Gen. John C. Fremont, Gen. Franz Sigel, Gen. Wager Swayne, Gen. Keye. Gen. Whipple, and Recorder Smyth helped Gen. Alger bow to the procession. Gen. Sherman, who had been announced as reviewerin-chief, had changed his mind and gone to Cleveland to take part in the ceremonies there.
The Old Guard acted as execut to the reviewing officers and was drawn up in line facing them on the east side of the column while the procession based.

The Old Guard acted as ecort to the reviewing officers and was drawn up in line facing them on the east side of the column while the procession passed.

The police under Inspector Steers, had the crowd well back within lines and the broad stretch of the avenue was straight and unbroken before the line of mounted policemen who rode down at 10 o'clock ahead of the procession, which had started with military promotness. Gen. Fitzgerald and his staff rode at the head of the column, and Troop A. the new cavairy organization of well-known young men, seted as escort. The troop turned out about seventy-five men, beautifully mounted, and with their new uniforms and spiendid horsemanship they made an appearance of the troop in a public parade.

The First Brigade Signal Corps was after the troop, and the cheers were renewed when the first regiment of the brigade, the old Sixtynish, wung along with its ranks full from curb to curb, and its men marching with the sold, heavy step that gives the regiment such a business-like appearance whenever it takes a strollike this in public.

The Eighth Regiment came next and made a good showing, but the men's legs, which were claif in the regulation blue, suffered, by comparison with the glaring white duck legs which had made the Sixty-inth conspicuous and which were worn by most of the other regiments in line.

The Ninth Regiment had a larger turnout than usual. Its passage was followed by a burst of applause as the Twenty-second came into sight, conspicuous as well for its full ranks and fine marching as for the white coats of its uniform. It was followed by the Seventy-first, looking flows as a fiddle, and that again by more applause as the familiar gray coats and white holmets of the Seventh were seen up the evenue, coming along with a steady, even swing that made the street look as though an ocean of rolling white waves was sweeping down toward the stand. The broad avenue was scarcely wide enough for the regiment. It had more men than any other code in the display of horselesh.

The broad avenue was scarcely wide enough for the regiment. It had more man han no other organization in line. The twelfith Regiment closed the line of infantry, marchine in the feather, and was followed by the two batteries. First and Second. and their ragged flags got more appliause in a minute than had greeted all of the brave array of handsome stoppers who had headed the procession. Most of the old fellows plodded along on foot, but occasionally there would be a carriage with a suggestive crutch visible through the window, and all the members of Lloyd Aspinwall Post were in carriages.

Another feature of the procession that the crowd liked was the number of youngsters, little gries and boys, in particute uniforms, who marched with the veterans, many of the posts having one or two and some having seven or eight children in their rauks. The "colored troops," of whom there were several posts in line, also got a lot of applause and appreciated it with smiles that made dazzling lines of white teeth flash clear across the avenue.

After the regular Grand Army posts came several divisions made up of independent organizations, Among these were the Veteran Zouaves of New York city, the veteran organizations of the Seventy-third. Fortieth, hixty-ninth, and Thirty-eighth Hegiments of Volunteers, P. H. Sheridan Command, No. 1, of I nicel States army, and many veterans: Meagher's Irish Brigade Association, the Fleventh Hogiment Veteran Scotety Cadets, Hattalion des Gardes Lafayette, Volunteer Exempt and Veteran Guard.

After rassing the main stand the procession went down Fifth avenue to Fourteenth street, and so to the plaza at Union square, where it was reviewed by Grand Marshal Hyat and his staff. The First Brigade went on down to Washington square, to take part in the laying of the corner stone of the memorial arch, and the sterans dispersed at the corner of Thirteenth street and Fourth avenue, going in separate organizations to the various cemeteries to decorate the graves of connades.

There were no serious accidents slong the line, and so well were the police arrangements carried out that the streets were blockaded very littl

THE DAY IN BROOKLYN.

About 8,000 Men in the Parade-Services in the Long Island Cemeteries.

Carl Schurz was the orator at the old cemetery and there was singing by the Veteran Charal Club.

The members of Winchester Post 197 decorated the grave of Caot. Salmon Winchester, after whom the post was named. In Greenwood. Rankin Post 10, which did not take nart in the parade, had a celebration at the Soldiers' Monument in Greenwood, the address being delivered by the Rev. Dr. Moment. The Union Veteran Legion of New York decorated the grave of Gen. H. W. Halleck in Greenwood. Middleton Post 500 held services at the grave of Lieut Middleton, the Rev. S. Gifford Nelson delivering the address. Peter Cooper Post 311 paid its usual Memorial Day pligrimage to the grave of Feter Cooper in Greenwood and held services. There was singing by the Cooper Union Glee Club, music by the Sixty-ninth Regiment band, and addresses by Gon. Stewart L. Woodford and Dr. John Logan.

The Veteran Associations of the Fourteenth. Forty-eighth. Sixty-seventh. Ninetich, and 188th New York Volunteers marghed to the corner stone of the Soldiers' and Sallors' Monument on the Prospect Park plaza and decorated it with Rags and flowers. An address was made by Assistant District Attorney MeGuire. In Brooklyn from early morning until late at night yesterday the streets were thronged with blue-coated voterans. Business was very generally suspended all over the city. The national colors were displayed from all the publie buildings and from many private houses. The event of the day was the Grand Army and military parade. Between 8,000 and 9,000 men participated, and all the organizations turned out in fine shape, the veterans and their tattered war bauners attracting especial attention. The column was formed with military precision, and it moved from the fountain in Bedford avenue about 11 o'clock. The mounted police, unter the command of Sergeant Johnson, acted as escort. Capt. C. The procession was reviewed by Gov. Hill from a grand stand erected in Cumberland street, between Da Kalb and Willoughby avenues. The Governor and his staff reached the stand half an bour before the head of the procession came into view. He was accompanied by Mayor Chapin, and was loudly cheered. Mrs. Chapin and her little daughter sat near the Governor while the procession was passing.

There was not a hitch in the parade, and the march past occupied only a little more than an hour. The marines and blue lackets were enthusiastically cheered, and Brocklyn's handsome milliannes came in for appreciative plaudits. The Twenty-third and Forty-seventh Hegiments, in the opinion of some milliary critics, carried off the marching honors.

The warm hold which Gov. Hill has over the Democratic heart in Brocklyn was significantly manifested when the line organization of volunteer firemen was passing the grand stand. The old fire laddies, who almost without exception, are firm in the Governor to the scho.

There were two women in the parade. They marched with the veterans of Ford Fost and attracted much attention. The line of march was from Hedford avenue to Lafarette, to South Oxford street, to Hanson place, to Flatbush avenue, where the parade was dismarsed.

At the close of the parade the Governor was hurried over to New York to attend the Disabled veterans in carriages and wagons filled with flowers brought up the rear of the the "Letter Carifers' Friend." S. S. Cox.

The New York postmen assembled for the preliminary parade in Union square at 1 P. M. They were their gray summer uniforms, with white neckties and gloves and straw hats. Divided into two divisions, at the head of each of which was a section of the Eighth Regiment band, they began the march at ten minutes of two. At the head of the first division, flanking Grand Marshal Wambach of Station P. marched Superintendent Newsome and Chief Clerk Allen of the General Post Office. The paraders were divided into companies corresponding to the different Post Offices. The carriers of the General Post Office headed the procession, and then followed the quotas of the stations in nearly alphabetical order. The blue flag of the Postal Department, the national ensign, and the flag of the Letter Carriers' Association were borne at the head of the column, and each company carried a small blue flag emblazoned with its station letter.

At the rear of the procession was a wagon laden with the flowers to be placed on the dead Congressman's grave. Among the designs was a hugeletter formed of white immortelles, bordered with the black flower of the species. The letter was addressed in black letters to the "Letter Carriers' Friend," and in the corner were the words "At Rest." The postmark, formed of black immortelles toff the date and the hour of Mr. Cox's death, "Sept. 17, 8:30 A. M." Hed immortelles formed the postage stamp, and coses and daisles ornamented the floral envelope at the corners. There were also tributes from the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Court of Foresters.

In their march to the bridge the postmen passed the residence of Mrs. Cox at 13 East Twelfth street, and that of Fostmaster Van Cott in Clinton place, Mrs. Cox at 13 East Twelfth street, and that of Fostmaster Van Cott reviewed the narade from the steps of his house. He was unable on account of finess to take part in the formal review at the Brooklyn Post Office.

Reaching Broadway by way of Fourth street, the postmen marched down to the City Hall Park, through which they passed to the bridge. They were met at the other end by the Brooklyn postmen, who escerted them to the General Post Office of that city, from the steps of which Postmaster Hendrix reviewed them. From Atlantic and Flatbush avenues they proceeded to Greenwood, where l'estmaster Hendrix delivered a eulogy of Mr. Cox. paraders were divided into companies corresponding to the different Post Offices. THE GOVERNOR'S RECEPTION.

In the morning Gov. Hill had been escorted from the home of Mayor Chapin, in Eighth avenue, Brooklyn, where he passed the night, by the police mounted squad and the signal corps of the Second Brigade, to the residence of Moses May, at 5000 Bradford avenue, where a reception took place for a couple of hours. The Governor was accompanied by Mayor Chapin, City Auditor Rutan, Chairman of the Memorial Committee G. A. R. and Beuben Riley. Chairman of the Public Service Committee. Several carriages followed containing the members of his staff. The streets in the neighborhood of Mr. May's house were lined with spectators, and there was constant cheering and waving of bandkerchiefs as the Governor descended from his carriage and entered the house. He remained on the stoop for a couple of minutes, bowing to the enthusiastic crowd. The reception was held in the pariors, the visitors being introduced by Mr. May and Ira Leo Bamborger. From forty to fifty ladies were present, and the following named assisted Mrs. May in receiving: Mrs. Chapin, Mrs. Hugh Mol.aughlin, Mrs. Bamberger, Mrs. F. Gollinger, May in receiving: Mrs. Chapin, Mrs. Hugh Mol.aughlin, Mrs. Bamberger, Mrs. F. Gollinger, May in receiving mrs. Chapin, Mrs. Hugh Mol.aughlin, Mrs. Bamberger, Mrs. F. Sylvester Malone, Revenue Collector Ernst Nathan. Admiral Braine. Gen. McLeer, Capt. Ambrose Snow. John P. Adams, Congressman Magner. Congressman MeAdoo, Postmaster lendrix. ex-Mayor Whitney, Folice Superintendent Campbell, ex-Senator Murtha. Comptroller Jackson, the Hev. Dr. Wintney, and the Rev. Father Klely. Mr. McLaughlin was the last man to shake the Governor's hand and it was noticeable that the shake was carticularly friendly on The members of E. D. Morgan Post, No. 307, G. A. R., together with those of the David G. Farragut Post, No. 75; representatives from the Naval Post, No. 516, and the Alexander Hamilton Post, No. 182, left the parade at Thirteenth street and Fourth avenue, and at 1:50 P. M. took a special train to Woodlawn Cemetery, where the monument erected by the E. D. Morgan Post to the memory of Samuel Minnes was dedicated. The monument is in the north central portion of the cemetery, on Codar plot, near Rutgers avenue. It is a shaft of Maine granite ten feet in height and four feet six inches square at the base. On it are inscribed the emblems of the Grand Army of the Republic, and of the Second, Third, and Fifth Army Corps. Brovet Capt. Samuel Minnes, whose memory it commemorates, en-listed when 17 years old with the First New listed when 17 years old with the First New York Volunteer Regiment on the day the first recruiting office was opened. He served with that and the Tenth New York Volunteers with credit until the close of the war, from which time to his death, on Dec. 5, 1889, he was a Custom House inspector. His death was from the effects of a wound received in the battle of the Wilderness. For many years he wore the bullet which inflicted it attached to his watch chain. Minnes organized the James C. Rice Post. No. 29, and the E. D. Morgan Post. He was Senior Vice-Commander of the State of New York in 1873. The monument was appropriately presented by Past Commander Lawrence Freeland, who was largely instrumental in its erection, and accepted by Commander Alexander Newburger, both of the Morgan Post. It was unveiled by three-year-old Gracte Meiville Tompkins. The oration was delivered by Gen. James it. O'Rierne. Gen. Ira M. Hedges of Haverstraw also spoke. About 10,000 people were in attendance.

The grare of Admiral David G. Farragut, in also spoke. About 10,000 people were in attendance.

The grave of Admiral David G. Farragut, in Woodlawn Cemetery, was covered with flowers by the post which bears his name. The post also carried the colors which flew from the Hartford during the war.

The old Empire rowing race course, although the spot where, twenty and more years ago, the Biglins, McKay, Billy Wallace, John Kyle, Jack Blue, Steve Roberts, and other old-timers had their races, never presented such a lively appearance as it did yestesday, when the Harappearance as it did yestesday, when the Harlem Regatta Association held their twentyfourth annual regatta there. The course that Jack Abeel and his assistants had carefully laid out was a full mile on the Hariem River from Ninety-fourth to 114th streets, and for the race for the Harlem Cup a mile and a haif, from about the same start to a point beyond the bend in the river. All along the bank of the river on decky yessels and hears, brick and lumon docks vessels, sand heaps, brick and lum-ber piles crowds of people assembled to see the racing. The barge John Neilson lay along-side the dock at the finish, and was filled with friends of the rowers; and on the water craft of every kind were affeat, alive with men, women, and children, who wanted to see the contests. The boats flocked about the finishing point, and stretched far down the borders of the course.

The occupants of many steam vessels did their full share toward creating excitement. The Laura M. Starin, crowded to the rails, held the association's guests: the Excelsior, with a party from Ravenswood, came over to cheer their racing representatives on: the Harlem. John T. Pratt, and others all lent powerful aid toward making pandemonium, and during the afternoon there was the wildest kind of a time. The racing was excellent. The course was wide, the day fine, and the water smooth. The tide was rather strong, running on the flood toward the New York shore, and this caused delays in starting large fleets, but otherwise the course was found to be all that was want-ed. A headquarters for the contenants had been provided on the Consolidated Gas Com-pany's property, between Ninety-eighth and Ninety-ninth streets.

The officials of the day were as follows: Referee and starter, John E. Curtis of the Atalantas; timekeepers, J. H. Abeel, Jr., Nassaus, and H. J. Behrens, Jr., Nonparells; Judges at finish, F. Gerow, Nassau; G. Johnston and H. Seymour, Nonparells, and George M. Young. Nassaus.

finish. F. Gerow. Nassau: G. Johnston and H. Seymour. Nonparells, and George M. Young. Nassaus.

It took a long time to start the first race, which was for junior singles and had nine starters. The tide carried the boats over toward the New York shore, and this, together with the bersistent efforts of McManus to get the boat into line for half an hour. When they did get off these men get under way: P. F. Sharkey. Ravenswood: W. Mahoney. Metropolitan: G. Weiss, N. Y. A. C.; R. Loughlin, Albany: J. J. Lynch. Riverside; T. Wade, Nonparell: J. Schill, Union; T. Mc-Manus, Metropolitan, and W. N. Butler. Dunham, of New Haven. McManus got a little the best of the start, but it was not much, and the send-off was generally good. Several contestants ran afoul of each other before half a mile was rowed, but as none of the men were anywhere near the front at the finish, nobody made any protests. Schill took the lead at the quarter, and increased it before the half was reached, but Mahoney came through the ruck rowing strong and led at the end of three-quarters of a mile. McManus also passed Schill soon after the three-quarters, but couldn't overhaal Mahoney, who pulled a steady, even stroke throughout. Mahoney crossed the line first by less than a length, in 6 minutes 32 seconds, and the others were well up in a bunch.

The second race was for the four-oared senior shells, and proved to be a repetition of last year's duel at Albany between the Atalanta and Metropolitan crows. The Atalanta men were J. A. Dempsey, W. H. Lau, M. Lau, and G. C. Dempsey, stroke. The Metropolitans were T. Nearing, J. A. Henry, J. E. Nagle, and Jim Pilkington istroke. They got off without trouble, and the Atalantas took the lead at once. The Mets pulled easy at first and the Atalantas let up a little when they had secured a lead of half a length. Then the Mets hit it up, caught their opponents and passed them by a quarter of a length. The was at the half. The Atalantas again spurted and the Mets did the same. The former forged gradually ahead, wh

The New Yorks were nip and tuck with the Atalantas and were just beginning to put in some good work when the Starin once more crossed head first onto the course between the Atalantas and New Yorks, and made the latter swerve to the left and thus lose valuable time. The Atalantas and college boys both got a good deal of her wash U. of P. particularly, but all continued on for home. Just about this time the Atalantas made a grand relly and spurted up to Pennsylvania's waist, but they were promptly shaken off. At the mile Pennsylvania had a length of clear water, and again the Atalantas went in to head her off. They got up to the collegians' rudder, but could advance no further. The New Yorks, too, made a great effort to overhaul the others, but the loss they incurred by the interference of the Starin proved too much for them, and they could only shut out clear water between them and the Atalantas were in 7 min. 34 sec. The Atalantas were six seconds behind, and the N. Y. A. C. were third by also six seconds.

After the coutests the prizes were distributed to the winners in the Metropolitans' boat house.

STATEN ISLAND VS. GERMANTOWN. The Germantown Club of Philadelphia played at Staten Island yesterday, and won a good game by 57 runs in the first innings. Lane, the professional of the Staten Island Club, was the only man who did any good bowling for the home team, but both 8, Welsh and Clark were successful with the ball for Philadelphia. One of the peculiar features of the game was the innings of E. H. Outenbridge, who was at the wickets forty-dre minutes for his three runs. The full score follows:

WOLFF & RANDOLAH, Philadelphia, dak in Drug, Pater and Have Perilahan Sura,

A Messenger Boy Robs His Employees, Thomas Farrell celebrated his thirteenth birthday on Thursday by robbing his employers of $212.45. Farrell has been employed by the Postal Telegraph Company on Broadway. He lives at 127 Mott street. Superintendent John H. Emerich frequently sent Farrell to different banks to cash checks. On Thursday while Mr. Emerich was out young Farrell took two checks of the face value of $245,45 and had them cashed at a branch office of the company at 187 Broadway.

The boy then went to Canal street and Broadway where he met a man who he claims but him up to steal the money on the bromise of taking him to Chicago. When the boy gave the money to the man, the latter suddenly disappeared.

Farrell was arrested and in the Tombs Police Court yesterday, Judge Smith heid him in $500 bail for trial.

A dollar and sixty cents was all the money the boy had when taken into custedr. He claims that the man to whom he gave the money gave him only $2. John H. Emerich frequently sent Farrell to
